Table of contents

Acknowledgements 7

Introduction 9

Chapter I. From Written Evidence to Illiterate Communities: Narratives on the Barbarians 17

1. Literary Topoi and Reality 17
2. Cross-Cultural Communication as a Source Studies Problem. In Praise of Barbarian Hospitality and Decorum 26

Chapter II. The Laws of the Barbarians 43

1. From Recited to Written Law 43
2. The Law and the Song 52
3. Barbarians and Romans amidst the Ruins of the Empire: The Principle of the Ethnic Separation of Laws 57
4. Between Tribal Tradition and the Pressure of Civilization 75
5. Foreign Script, Native Speech 82

Chapter III. An Individual in the Realm of a Kinship Community 101

1. Revenge and Wergild 101
2. Parties to Feud and to Reconciliation 109
3. Collective Guilt, Collective Honor, and Collective Oath 130
4. Women under Men's Authority 134

Chapter IV. Some above Others: Social Differences in the Tribal System 145

1. Outside the Community of Law: Slaves 145
2. The Laeti 156
3. Social Diversification among Free Tribespeople 171

Chapter V. The Community of Neighbors and its Territory 215

1. The Neighborly Community of the Commons 216
2. The Territorial Scope of the Community 230

Chapter VI. The Political Dimensions of Neighborhood 237

1. Centena, Pagus and Go 241
2. Kopa and Opole 272

Chapter VII. The Institutions of the Tribal Community 285

1. Segmentary Structures 285
2. The Assembly and Cult 293
3. The King 330

Epilogue: The End of the World of the Barbarians 349

List of Abbreviations 379

Primary Sources and their Abbreviations 381

Secondary Sources 387

Author's Note Regarding the Translations of the Primary Sources 407

Index of Names 409